This upper-division course explores critical transnational feminisms as an intersectional set of knowledges, methods, and practices. This course will help participants to:

- understand racialized, classed, masculinized, and heteronormative logics,
- understand globalization, capitalist patriarchy and colonial relations of domination and subordination,
- rethink assumptions about feminist politics in transnational contexts.

Course material will consist of one textbook (available in e-form), as well as online journalistic pieces from alternative media sources and documentary films of/by women from all continents including North America.

For more information, please contact Dr. Manal Hamzeh on manahamz@nmsu.edu or check her web page on http://wsprogram.nmsu.edu/faculty-and-staff/manal-hamzeh/

See students’ recommendations of Dr. Hamzeh’s courses on https://vimeo.com/32186770